I think it's a prototype of a conflict to be finalised soon. I think the map could be refined, because some parts are not entirely clear, such as in this photo: Autocar Calls for the Vios name to return in the line-up of new units. On Monday, General Motors announced that it was dropping the Vios nameplate, which it says was an unnecessary continuation of a model that only sold for two years. The car was also sold as a hatchback, in some markets it was a sedan, and was a crossover in the UK. Autocar understands that the next Mazda3 to be launched under the 'Mazda3' badge will be a Mazda-badged petrol hatchback, and will share the platform and powertrain with the Mazda CX-5 crossover. A Mazda spokesperson said: "The new Mazda3 crossover, which is a key model for Mazda in the CX-5 segment, will launch first in Europe at the end of 2015 as a CX-5. It is very important for Mazda to develop the CX-5 as a standalone model. Mazda never said it wouldn't make a new car in the compact class, so we decided we want to focus on the CX-5 to strengthen that platform for the future. "The Mazda3 crossover will share the platform 3da54e8ca3
