Kaspar Khudai Khan first appeared in the reign of Sultan Mahmud and was present at the battle of Ghazni in 1015, and served at the battle of Lahore in 1017. He was also present at the battle of Dandadhara in 1022. After the death of Mahmud, there was a struggle for the succession, between Mahmud's sons `Adud-Din and Ahmad-Shah. During the struggle, Kaspar Khudai Khan sided with Ahmad-Shah and was rewarded the governorship of the Ghurid territories. After Mahmud's death, however, `Adud-Din took control of the Ghurid territories in 1018. References Sources Holmgren, J. G. I., Medieval Warfare: A History. London, Longman, 2003. Like many of you, I am excited to see the year's best films. However, I am also concerned for the rights of the artists whose intellectual property is used to create the films we all enjoy. The celebration of their work has a long history of being co-opted by the corporations who wield the greatest influence in our society. As much as I am a fan of the films and artists featured on The Oscars® for the 89th
