One such card is Musco. Musco in his fourteenth set launch was revealed yesterday, and we have the full breakdown of what the card does (and doesn't do). A new Musco Much like the previous Musco, he is a 1/1 for 2 and that's it. But has two new abilities that are quite cool. Puncture Musco's second ability will deal a direct damage to an attacking opponent. The amount of damage it deals is equal to the original target's toughness. If you're wondering, yes, this does prevent the target's toughness from increasing, as any damage counters will be removed. It's not an attack through creatures if you're wondering. Whenever an opponent attacks you, Musco deals 3 damage to them. Blockade Musco's second ability is a repeatable counter (from the rules page): Counter target creature. Counter target instant or sorcery card. Counter target spell card. Let's look at how that interacts with one of the more powerful blue cards from the Battle for Zendikar set, Nethercaster. Nethercaster is a four-mana Planeswalker who just gives your opponents -1/-1 counters. Well, this card gives your opponents Musco. It also prevents them from triggering Nethercaster. That
